

Faculty of Law

The University of Lucerne is the youngest of the Swiss Universities. Founded in the year 2000, the University has three faculties and counts around 2600 students. The law faculty has gained a reputation both nationally and internationally in a very short period of time. This young faculty provides an innovative, broad and internationally focused programme for its approximately 1250 students and 150 doctorates. The personal mentoring of students and the close link between research and practice together with the motivated and dynamic team distinguishes this faculty.
